Audacia

Meet the most recent release from Indie Hops — a “noble” hop with some attitude. Hersbrucker Pure mom meets nephew of Strata to create Audacia, a hop just as comfortable in IPA circles as in a noble gathering of world class lagers.

We took to calling this hop a sassy noble until we landed on the name Audacia — Latin for audacity, defined as “bold, marked by originality and verve.” Don’t let the noble heritage fool you, Audacia loves to surprise in the more brash IPA community. Launched from the 2023 crop, Audacia delivers flavor notes of huckleberry, currant, lingonberry and pomegranate that mingle with lavender, lilac and rose. Feels like a mid-summer picnic in the mid-latitudes!

As we taste Audacia in more beers, we continue to be impressed with how this hop brews up to its name. Audacia’s Hersbrucker Pure pedigree is evident in crisp lager beer, where the hop doesn’t try to steal the show but does provide a seductive finishing twist of flavor and aroma.

The 6% alpha coupled with a touch more potential to contribute hop character than mom, gives you flexibility to dial back usage for more traditional results, or let the juicy berries and floral aromatics shine. We’ve also experienced Audacia’s sassy, Strata-influenced side when paired with lead singer hops, but with its own unique twist. This hop makes a distinctive contribution of lavender / lilac / rose floral, seemingly propped up by the juicy, sweet-tangy berry flavors.
